WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Trump nominated Judge Brett Kavanaugh to the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday, naming a judge widely praised for his record of promoting religious liberty as one of America's top jurists, despite his initial ties to an abortion rights group. In announcing his nomination on Twitter, Trump called Kavanaugh "a brilliant jurist who has a proven track record as a judge and outstanding legal mind." Kavanaugh has served on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit since 2006. During his confirmation hearing, he told the Senate Judiciary Committee he was "committed to faithfully applying the law and furthering the law's promise of equal justice under the law." Kavanaugh received his law degree from Yale and his undergraduate degree from Columbia. He clerked for former Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and the late Justice Antonin Scalia, and later for Justice Kennedy. He became a law professor at Yale in 1999, and from 2001 to 2006 served as staff secretary for former President George W. Bush. While working in the White House, Kavanaugh received extensive criticism from Democrats for advancing Bush's legal agenda, including the George W. Bush administration's handling of the Supreme Court fight over the partial-birth abortion ban, and pushing for the signing of the controversial "Patriot Act." Democrats raised concern that his experience working for a Republican president and with highly partisan judges could put him on a court that will likely swing right on an array of issues that have divided the nation. Kavanaugh wrote the majority opinion in the case that struck down the Stupak-Pitts amendment to the Affordable Care Act, which barred federal funding from going to abortion coverage. He wrote a dissent in the case that struck down the nation's first partial-birth abortion ban. He also wrote a dissent in a case that struck down a federal law banning the interstate transport of aborted babies, and in a dissent in another case that struck down a federal law protecting abortion providers from violence. But while the 10th Amendment Center gave Kavanaugh a "100" rating on its 2015 "Judicial Nominations Scorecard," which evaluates judicial nominees based on their record on religious liberty, he received a 100 from
